About the Author

Patricia F. Glenn has always possessed a passion for teaching. Her earliest teaching experiences were playing school with her younger brother and her dolls. She has been a student and educator for as long as she can remember. From the time she could talk, she asked questions and sought out answers. Patricia longs to share her discoveries with anyone who is open to hope and possibilities. She began formally teaching as a special needs educator to children from ages 3- adulthood more than sixteen years ago.

As a progressive educator, understanding the needs for these children were continuously going unmet within the confines of the school systems, she moved away from public education to develop Practice In Motion Training Institute, Inc. to support families more holistically and to bridge the gap where governmental services leave off. She heads this firm as a chief consultant. Patricia provides coaching, training, and consultations to support individual families, schools, and nonprofit organizations. Her work has expanded to provide research based strategies for educators to minimize the over identification of labeling students with disabilities.

Patricia understands both the need for strong academic foundation and personal development that afford this special population the opportunities to be prepared for a life of independence and purpose. Her work with this special population led her to an increased understanding of diversity and acceptance of all. Though acceptance was easy to extend to others, Patricia continued to struggle with unrestricted love and acceptance of herself.

Through a continued quest for understanding, Patricia sought a deeper understanding and relationship with God. During her decade of deliberate study, she was introduced to the work of numerous guides and teachers which led her to Conversations with God. Interacting with Neale Donald Walsch's work offered an understanding of how to bridge one's personal spiritual understanding with a broader community.

Patricia continues to be an active student and teacher. She resides in Atlanta, GA with her precious Cupcake (black and white tabby cat). Her desire and love to support children continues as she seeks opportunities to be a light of hope and possibilities to children and their caregivers around the planet. Patricia is a fully credentialed educator with the state of Georgia. She holds a Master's degree and an Educational Specialist's degree in Special Education from the University of West Georgia. She has continued additional post graduate work at Georgia Southern University to further research the societal factors that are impacting today's educational climate and its needs. She is also a state approved trainer with Bright from the Start to provide professional training and development for early child care providers.

Patricia has been a much sought-after leading expert in providing holistic approaches to address the challenges with which today's families and educators are faced when supporting children with special needs. She has been featured on the Twanda Black radio show, on Atlanta's KISS 104.1, People You Need to Know internet radio with Sparkplug, CBS 46 Atlanta nightly news as an educational expert, and FOX 5 Atlanta Wednesday's Child Program.
